Students Share Their Professors’ Effective Online Teaching Efforts & Ways to Thrive While Learning Online

This week CET features the student perspective as published in the Daily Trojan and Trojan 360, USC’s official student blog. You may find inspiration reading what students report as great faculty successes in finding caring, creative ways to maintain performance and art courses online. Their adaptations can be applied to courses in other disciplines requiring similar skills of demonstration and production. You may also wish to share the tips by students for students when it comes to participating in Zoom sessions and keeping organized with a new routine.
